Dr. Anup Katheria received his undergraduate degree from the University of California Los Angeles. He went on to receive his medical degree from Drexel University College of Medicine in Philadelphia. He completed his residency in pediatrics at Children's Hospital of Orange County and in neonatology at University of California San Diego. He has recently been appointed a member of the Society for Pediatric Research and assistant clinical professor at Loma Linda University. Dr. Katheria developed the Neonatal Research Institute with the goal of performing clinical trials designed to determine which therapies improve the care of our newborns.
